

Inside Me

I have an egg inside of me that urges to crack open. It slowly opens up, shy to the world.

I have a dragon in my head. When it's annoyed, first it'll snort at you. If you keep annoying it, it will claw at you, purposely missing. If you keep going it goes full strength.

There's a cliff in my stomach- I keep falling.

There's a grassland inside of my heart, hidden away. The animals that live there take care of their home.

There are little people inside of me to keep me on time and get ready for school.

There's a boy in my head ready to learn.

By Adrian Booth☺